

Why travelling to London?

London is an incredible city to visit. During my recent trip as a journalist, I discovered what makes London so special. The city is full of diversity, green spaces and famous monuments. I'll explain why London is an ideal destination for everyone. An Unforgettable Cultural Adventure.

I visited the National Gallery, in this world-renowned art museum 2,600 works are on display, enough to find one to your taste. Then, I went to the Science Museum, a very interesting museum where I could learn more about technology. The imperial war museum taught me a lot about history and its exhibition of vehicles, planes and objects gave us a better idea of what war was like. London is really a city rich in culture, especially thanks to its diversity. The most beautiful thing to discover in London is

Tower Bridge, a historic bridge that opens up to allow large ships to pass. Wembley Stadium is huge and is the venue for England's national team football matches and other events. Rampion Wind Farm is a wind farm on the Brighton coast that distributes energy to the local community produced by the wind farm. This is important for the planet, and the site's museum is very interesting, easy to understand and offers a simulation with a virtual reality headset that takes us out to sea in the wind turbines, where we can see the inside of the turbines and better understand how they work. If you're interested in green development and ecological progress, London has many buildings built ecologically or with innovative ecological features. Like The Gherkin, which has won several awards for its energy efficiency, and London City Hall, which has been designed to be as eco-friendly as possible. London is also a green city, with pretty parks like St. James's Park.

Behind St. James's Park is Buckingham Palace,

the official residence of the British monarchs.

I took a boat trip on the River Thames, which runs through the city. I saw famous monuments like Big

Ben, the London Eye and Tower Bridge.

I went to St Paul's Cathedral, which is a really pretty old church with a big dome. There's a museum in the cathedral that tells its history and lists the most important events that took place there, such as the wedding of Lady Diana and Prince Charles. I think this article will inspire you to discover all aspects of London. Clovis Jeannot TST12
